

Selecting the 'Right' College

A school's ASD, mental health and disability services may be more important to your child's success than any academic program. Students and parents should consider factors such as:

- ☐ Do they offer programs specifically designed for ASD students?
- ☐ What is the typical wait time to get services?
- ☐ Are the school's mental health services available 24/7?
- ☐ What types of providers are on staff?
- ☐ Do the providers have expertise in working with students on the Spectrum or do they refer them to disability services for support?
- ☐ What is the ratio between students and providers?
- ☐ Can students sign up online or do they need to visit the clinic in person?
